Project: a staying-power profile of one company

For the teacher. Every number comes from the filing named next to it.

What a full profile has

Part A: a named company, balance-sheet date, financial year, basis, exchange and filing date, and three page numbers.

Part B: every number used in Parts C and D appears in the log with a date and page. Spot-check three of them against the filing.

Part C: each of the five calculations shows formula, numbers and result. Both versions of the debt-equity ratio are labelled. The repayment sentence is quoted or paraphrased with its page.

Part D: the rating card names the agency and the report's date, and gives the rating, outlook, a strength, a weakness and a sensitivity in the student's words.

Part E: each result is explained as what it shows about the business. Remove any statement that the company is safe or risky, or any opinion on its shares, and give it no points.

Checking the numbers

If the company has a Cityfort stock page, its "Financial strength" section shows borrowings, cash, net worth and debt to equity with their sources. A student's number that differs may be standalone, a different date, or a version that counts leases or long-term borrowings only.

Notes

- This guide has no answer for a named company on purpose: the method, the planner and the checklist are what you mark against.
